

Working in Partnership Open Management International (OMI)

The Open
University

The Partner

OMI was established in 2007 as a provider of professional management education. It provides its own open/distance learning professional management development programmes for junior managers.

The owner of OMI is Miroslav Kucka, MSc, an alumnus of The Open University Business School's MBA. The organisation is developing and growing with the help and expertise of experienced tutors who have taught Open University Business School courses in the Slovak and Czech Republics under a previous partnership arrangement. Miroslav Kucka is a member of "famous forty", the first group of students in (former) Czechoslovakia, when the first partnership in the region started in 1990. He has been intensively involved in Open University Business School activities in former Czechoslovakia during the period of the previous partnership.

The Project

OMI presents the Open University Business School's Professional Certificate and Diploma in Management programmes, which are translated into both the Czech and Slovak languages, taught by their locally appointed part-time tutors. OMI also promotes and recruits students for The Open University Business School's Master of Business Administration (MBA).

The Aim

- To help managers and organisations to develop their management competencies by providing high quality management development programmes with an international reputation
- To help tutors to develop their skills and abilities by providing a high standard tutor development programme
- To further enhance The Open University Business School's reputation for delivering its programmes internationally

The Benefits

Academic and administrative experience from the co-operation and development of a partnership across two countries (Czech and Slovak Republics) and through diversified teaching and educational opportunities.
